

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for providing a substantially homogenous composition from partially immiscible liquids is disclosed where effective energy is applied as pulses of a given frequency to the interface region of an emulsion. The method and apparatus of the invention show substantial savings and efficiency in comparison with conventional methods.